

Left to right, Kay and Art Brief and Charlotte and Peter Gaffney (BBA '63, MBA '64). Brief's faculty office was named in recognition of a gift of the Gaffneys.

Jesse Corn (MBA '04) represented the Freeman School student body at the Goldring/Woldenberg Hall II ribbon-cutting ceremony.

Debra (N '74, MBA '77) and Rick Rees (A&S '75, MBA '75).

George Rizzo (MBA '65), along with his wife, Fay, provided a gift to make possible a faculty office.

Barbara and Jerry Greenbaum (BBA '62) provided a gift to make possible the Greenbaum Lecture Theater.

Left: Jerry Finger ('54) and his wife, Nanette, were recognized for their gift with the dedication of the Trading Center Control Room.

Antoinette and Paul Rumely (MBA '73)

Left: James S. Carter Sr. (MBA '74), with daughter Stephanie (N '01) and wife Melinda, was recognized for his gift to Goldring/Woldenberg Hall II with the dedication of the Carter Executive Office Suite.

Astrolab, a sculpture by artist Gianmaria Potenza, was donated to the Freeman School by Selma and Ralfe Silverman (BBA '52).

Dean McFarland, right, and the family of Allan Shwartzstein (BSM '86), an equity trader killed in the World Trade Center attacks. An office in Goldring/Woldenberg Hall II was dedicated in Shwartzstein's memory.

Tulane President Scott Cowen addresses the audience at the Goldring/Woldenberg Hall II ribbon-cutting ceremony.

Above and below, the Selber and Bories families, the descendants of William B. Burkenroad, were recognized for their gifts with the dedication of the Burkenroad Center, which houses both Burkenroad Reports and the Burkenroad Institute. Above, Peggy ('53) and Aaron Selber (BBA '50), center, flanked by Dean McFarland and the rest of the family. Below, Jane Bories (N '51) and Bobby Bories, center, and members of the Bories-Selber families.

Pepper and Marian Bright, above, admire a painting in the third-floor gallery. Bill Goldring (BBA '64) personally selected works from his collection at the Ogden Museum of Southern Art to be reproduced for display in the new building.

Hunter and Cathy Pierson (G '78, SW '89), chairman of the Board of Tulane. The Piersons provided funds to make possible Goldring/Woldenberg Hall II's Media Center.

James and Doris Murphy. Murphy was a professor at the Freeman School for 35 years and served as interim dean on three occasions.

Freeman School Associate Dean Peggy Babin and Stacey Berger (A&S '76, MBA '78). Berger and his wife, Evie, provided funds for a faculty office.

Dean McFarland, right, and the family of Doug Irgang (BSM '91). An office in Goldring/Woldenberg Hall II was dedicated in memory of Irgang, a victim of the World Trade Center attacks.

Members of the Woldenberg family represented the Goldring and Woldenberg families at the ribbon-cutting ceremony. The Goldrings and the Woldenbergs provided anchor gifts to make Goldring/Woldenberg Hall II possible.

Goldring/Woldenberg Hall II architect David Waggoner, left, and Freeman School Associate Dean Jerry Hagebusch.

Darwin Fenner (BBA '54, MBA '69), Aaron Selber (BBA '50) and Pepper Bright.

